The CMO as Master of Data

Kathleen Schaub, VP, CMO Advisory Practice, IDC

The self-educated customer is driving unprecedented change in the marketing function. Marketing's capture of Big Data, along with analytics, "sense and respond" opportunities, and other new capabilities hold the promise that marketing will have greater business impact than ever before. The Chief Marketing Officer of the future must become a "master of data" — capable of collecting, analyzing, and bringing insight into the streams of data that buyers create as they travel through digital and social pathways. But the CMO is going to need a data-savvy partner in the CIO to make this work. What does it take to lead your company in capitalizing on this new era of data-driven marketing? What questions must you answer? What skills do you need in your organizations? Join Kathleen Schaub, Vice President, IDC CMO Advisory Service, as she goes behind the scenes and shares the challenges and impacts that big data will have on the CMO.

2:05 pm - 2:10 pm

CIO/CMO Visions

John Rizzo, Chief Marketing Officer, Jive Software

Social for the enterprise isn't what you think. Join us for key lessons for the CIO and CMO.

2:10 pm - 3:20 pm

CIO/CMO Panel and Workshop: Building Credibility with the CEO and the Board

David Buckholtz, VP, Corporate Information Technology, Sony Pictures Entertainment

Julie Firestone Garlikov, VP of Marketing, Torani

John Rizzo, Chief Marketing Officer, Jive Software

Mike Sabin, SVP and GM, Partner Solutions, Dun & Bradstreet

Bob Melk, SVP, Group Publisher & CMO, IDG Enterprise

CIOs and CMOs face a similar challenge when it comes to elevating the discussion of their priorities to the CEO and the board, yet this executive buy-in is key for success (and funding). Join Bob Melk and CIOs and CMOs from the day's Visionary sponsors and other companies as they lead a discussion of challenges and approaches to raising the visibility of their initiatives to the highest level. We'll then break into workgroups to brainstorm a range of questions and discuss those ideas with the panel. Don't miss this opportunity to learn actionable skills from your experienced peers!

3:20 pm - 3:50 pm
