

Professor Elizabeth (Liz) Farmer

Chair, Medical Board of Australia Expert Advisory Group on Revalidation

Professor Liz Farmer is a general practitioner and Chair of the of the Medical Board of Australia's Expert Advisory Group on Revalidation. She is also Chair of the Australian Medical Council's Prevocational Standards Accreditation Committee, a role she has held since 2013.

In 2007, Professor Farmer was appointed as Dean of Medicine at the University of Wollongong and became the first female general practitioner to become the Dean of a medical school in Australia.

Following this, Professor Farmer was the Executive Director of Workforce Innovation and Reform at Health Workforce Australia and led a national program developing policy and practice in health workforce innovation and reform for all health professionals.

She is an Honorary Clinical Professor at the University of Wollongong, Adjunct Professor in the Discipline of General Practice within the School of Population Health and Clinical Practice at the University of Adelaide and Professorial Fellow in the School of Medicine at Flinders University Adelaide.

Professor Farmer now works full time as an independent health sector consultant specialising in health professional education and assessment, accreditation, revalidation and policy development.