

The Okavango Delta - Botswana

The Okavango Delta, one of the most incredible wilderness sanctuaries in Africa, is 15 000 square kilometres of water channels, lagoons and islands. Each year, floodwaters flow from the central African highlands over 1 000 km away into the Delta to create this wondrous wetland within a desert.

Highlights of the Okavango Delta

- The variety of flora and fauna means excellent game viewing year round
- With such a profusion of life, predators in the form of lion, leopard, cheetah, hyaena and wild dog abound
- Mokoro excursions offer an authentic and unobtrusive insight into this incredible wetland paradise
- Flights between camps showcase this truly unique and pristine ecosystem

Getting into Botswana is generally by air, with international travellers flying first into O.R. Tambo Airport in South Africa before transferring into Botswana. There are flights between Johannesburg and Maun, gateway to the Okavango as well as to Gaborone and Kasane. There are also flights from other African airports should you be transferring internally.
