

WHERE STUDENTS LEAD

Education is changing. Experiential learning is spreading.

Students are leading and taking control of the future.

Where Students Lead chronicles the dramatic student impact of the CAPS profession-based education model, and its growth across the country. The film and speaking tour is part of an overarching campaign to propel experiential learning. CAPS is one example of the global experiential learning movement impacting all levels of education.

collaborate · innovate · educate

Built around the Center for Advanced Professional Studies (CAPS), and the CAPS profession-based model, the CAPS Network is a collection of students, educators and business partners who share a common vision for the future of education. Currently, the network is comprised of 49 affiliate programs, 99 school districts, 13 states and 2 countries.

The CAPS model transforms the educational experience, centering on students' interests with opportunities for real-world immersion and authentic projects, resulting in highly-skilled, adaptable, global innovators, and leaders. Five core values unite, define and guide the CAPS Network experience: Profession-based Learning, Responsiveness, Self-Discovery and Exploration, Professional Skills Development, Entrepreneurial Mindset.
