DESCRIPTION:

There is currently no well-established periodic health review template used uniformly across long-term care facilities in Newfoundland and Labrador. The purpose of this project is to develop an evidence-based periodic review template to make available for clinicians. Long-term care clinicians across the province will be surveyed to determine how they believe a periodic health review should be conducted in their patient population. The results of this study will be used to design a periodic health review template that will be distributed to long-term care clinicians to use at their discretion.
