15.30 – 16.00	Pat Daly - Analyst, 451 Research	IoT in the DC - The introduction of connected devices into the datacenter has enabled operators to remotely monitor and manage critical systems, such as power management, cooling and fire suppression, bringing with them the promise of predictive maintenance and ease of control. However, these deployments have the unintended effect of exposing systems that have heretofore been tightly controlled, opening the door for remote exploitation of the devices themselves and potentially leading to the compromise of the datacenter's most critical assets. This presentation provides an overview of the security challenges of bringing the "Internet of Things" into datacenter environments and offers operators guidance on reducing risks.
