

Cameron Bertron

Cameron is Vice President of Development Services at EFG Brownfield Partners and manages the real estate and financing components of Brownfield and Infill projects. With more than a decade of public and private sector real estate experience, he brings a hands-on understanding of how successful public –private partnerships are structured and financed. Prior to coming to EFG Brownfield Partners, Cameron was Redevelopment Manager for the Denver Urban Renewal Authority where he helped facilitate and finance infill projects ranging from the adaptive reuse of historic structures like the Lowenstein Theater to the repurposing of major facilities into whole new neighborhoods like Stapleton and Lowry. His practical approach to market analysis, underwriting and pro forma development, community process, and site development, allow him to develop development strategies that are cost effective, market feasible and consistent with the goals and objectives of the surrounding community.

Mr. Bertron holds degrees in economics, urban planning and public finance from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the University of Colorado.
