Occlusion, Aesthetics & The Digital Revolution

Over the years dentistry has developed divisions. One of the greatest divides has been between traditional functional dentistry and so-called “cosmetic” practices. But do our patients want or expect just one or the other? I do not believe so and my experience is that our patients expect both to be delivered at the same time. We now have a population who want to look their best and keep their teeth for a lifetime and with the advent of new techniques and materials our patient’s goals can usually be met. Also digital technology is revolutionizing our practices and treatment protocols and there is no doubt that it can improve accuracy, efficiency and productivity. But can it really do what traditional dentistry achieves?

We also realize that our patient's dental needs are changing – as they keep their teeth longer, some dentitions are simply wearing out. Add to that a generation that has been “drilled and filled” and we have a difficult problem to solve. Wear, tooth surface loss, “occlusal disease” – however we choose to describe it – we must learn to diagnose and treat it in the same way we have learned to evaluate traditional dental disease. A complete assessment will allow more treatment to be carried out with longer – lasting, more predictable results. Happier patients and less stress all round!

Objectives:

Upon completion of this lecture, attendees will:

- Understand the Concept of Complete Dentistry
- Understand how to use digital technology to aid examination, diagnosis and treatment planning
- Occlusal goals for predictable success
- A step by step approach to predictable treatment planning
- Develop a knowledge of the technology available for restorative, orthodontic and implant procedures
