Company: Garden Collage

Pay Range: Between $100 and $375 dollars per 500 to 3000-word piece, specifics of which are negotiable.

How Freelancers are used: We use freelance writers, photographers, and graphic designers, all of whom are responsible for content generation (so, original well-researched, incisive articles, images, and designs). We don't use freelancers for, say, research or content marketing (we have a team in-house who handles that).

Desired Skills: An ability to write clearly and coherently about current events in the world of wellness, nature, fashion, popular culture, trends, and various combinations and extensions thereof.

Organization Info: Garden Collage curates stories about the aesthetic value of gardens, plant-based beauty products, environmental policy, the farm to table movement, DIY gardening tips, travel journals, and other fresh takes on the value of gardening in our modern world. We have one of the most beautiful websites on the internet (seriously: google it) and so it is important that our writers think about the visual frame they'd like us to take with each piece. Would this piece be better served as a photo essay? Should we send a photographer to work with you on site of an interview? Clients who have a creative mind in addition to journalistic integrity do particularly well with us.

David Bogoslaw

Company Category: Trade Magazine

Company:	Corporate Secretary
Pay Range:	$125 for articles with one source and $25 more for each additional source. Online stories are typically 450 to 600 words. Many of these stories are based on press releases or other announcements about new survey reports or research studies that usually summarize the key findings and require little more than interviewing a source associated with the study who can provide more color or context on the findings, what they mean for companies and how they might translate into best practice tips for companies' compliance & ethics and overall governance programs. I both assign stories and accept pitches from writers. For enterprise stories (which are obviously more fulfilling to write & edit), I'm trying to get approval for a higher rate that would reward the initiative of writers willing to do some original thinking and digging. I hope that will be coming in the near future. And on those types of stories, I'm happy to share sources and give other suggestions.
