

Chris Antonello has over three decades of successful leadership experience in industries ranging from consumer durables to insurance. He currently serves as Operating Partner for Plexus Capital, a lower-middle market investment firm, where his main focus is to increase the enterprise value of underperforming portfolio companies. Prior to joining Plexus, Chris ran privately held companies where he leveraged his 28 years of experience with GE. At GE, he held roles in manufacturing, marketing, sales and service across three different GE businesses. Chris earned his engineering degree in mechanical engineering from West Virginia University and a masters in management from University of Louisville.